Statistical inference and computation of network structures present great challenges. This talk explores a sample of computational problems in network data analysis, including Monte Carlo algorithms and a range of examples that illustrate the proposed methods.